

October 2004

Karen worked as our marketing manager and in doing so, increased our national and international manufacturer's representatives substantially, which was critical to expanding our market share worldwide. She also took the initiative and then managed over the redevelopment of our website and marketing materials, helping our clients to better navigate through our product line, but most of all, to help make our small startup look big to the large customers we wanted to attract. She was instrumental in our landing a large deal with Microsoft's Xbox. She is very dedicated, skillful and capable and was always the first to volunteer to help with everything, which is critical in a startup. I live overseas now, but would hire her again if the opportunity arose.

- Israel Zilberman, Founder and CEO of ScanLogic Corporation